Wickaninnish Gallery is a unique northwest coast First Nations gift boutique. Owned and founded by Patricia Rivard, the gallery is named after Chief Wickaninnish- the most powerful chief among the Nuu-chah-nulth in the late 1700s. The youngest of Chief Wickaninnish's four daughters was the mother of Rivard's grandfather. The gallery offers an ever-changing selection of affordable art, jewellery, pottery, limited edition prints, wood and soapstone carvings, and other high-quality items created by northwest coast First Nation artists. Particularly popular are custom-designed wedding rings, bracelets, earrings, and necklaces carved with the traditional symbols such as the bear, thunderbird, wolf, raven, and eagle. Established in 1987, Wickaninnish Gallery serves a loyal worldwide clientele that returns for the unmatched selection and knowledgeable staff. The boutique is located at the world-famous Granville Island, just off the downtown core of Vancouver, British Columbia.
